DANGER: Tornadoes!

Tornadoes are terrifying. They are sudden, strong and very destructive. And there is nothing you can do to stop them.

They are fascinating, too. They can destroy houses, cars and roads in seconds. But they can also carry a baby or a pile of plates several kilometres... and put them down intact.

The film Twister is about tornadoes... and the people who watch them. Two rival groups are trying to get information about a very big tornado. Who will win? Nice Jo and Bill with their students and their broken car, or mean Dr Miller with his assistants and his expensive equipment?

SPECIAL FX

To make an adventure film, you need special effects. For Twister, the weather is very important. The special-effects coordinator explains, "To make hail, I put milk in ice so the ice is easier to see." There are also flying houses and cows. Sound is very important, too. A mix of different noises, including camels, makes the unique tornado sound.

"We all want to be close to danger," says Jan De Bont, director of Speed and Twister. "Not in danger, but we want the excitement. And that's what this film is all about."
